UserManager = Legacy_UserManager

https://firebirdsql.org/file/documentation/release_notes/html/en/3_0/rlsnotes30.html#rnfb30-compat-initsec

This initialization is not required and should not be performed if you have configured the server to use legacy (pre-Firebird 3 style) authentication and user management. The legacy security plugins totally preserve the legacy behaviour and thus contain the legacy record for SYSDBA with “masterke” as the initial password.

The dconf API is not particularly friendly, and is not guaranteed to be stable. Because of this and the lack of portability, you almost certainly want to use some sort of wrapper API around it. The wrapper API used by GTK+ and GNOME applications is GSettings, which is included as part of GLib. GSettings has backends for Windows (using the registry) and Mac OS (using property lists) as well as its dconf backend and is the proper API to use for graphical applications.
